WENT TO HIS DOOM.

Mr. Holt, Who Arrived In Salt Lake Yesterday, Was In Charge of the Indiana's Fire Rooms During the Battle-Hobson's Feat In Sinking

story story specified was one of salt Lake to find out how the measure creating the new circuit stood, did so, without any hope of reward.

"At about the same time the Indiana started on the chase, and these were the busiest times we had down below, Captain Taylor sent his orders down thick and fast, ordering us to put on more steam. We did all we could, and just got a good, fair start, when we were ordered back to the harbon essed. Then Captain Taylor sent his part of the country word that everything was sunk or sinking, and that there was no more firing to do. He congratulated his men, and everybody run on deck. The Oregon came up about this time and fired a thirteen-inch shell across the Colon's low, and she hauled down in a hurry. The Oregon's chase was great. She was making seventeen

But sampson is the man, it was in-fortunate that he should have been away when the fight came off, but it was in the line of duty and he deserves the credit he has received."

Speaking of Hobson's feat, Holt said the sinking of the Merrimac was wit-nessed from the deck of the Indiana, where the greatest interest was manifested during its enactment. There was great joy aboard when it was learned that the gallant crew had lived safely

The only injury the Indiana experienced in the campaign was when a shell from Morro castle struck the quarter deck on the night of July 4. The hold was afire and six rooms were

"The sailors amused themselves with the Spanish prisoners aboard by confinually referring to the Vesuvius. This was one of a few words in our vocabulary that they understood, and it produced a shudder whenever mentioned. Some of them had been on land while the Vesuvius was in action and had witnessed its disastrous work.

"Cervera asked to be taken shoard the Indiana, for the reason that it was the alip which sunk his Maria Teresa, but Captain Evans of the lowa had previously arranged to accommodate him. The commander of the torpedo boat Pluton was taken aboard the Indiana, however, and had his leg amputated while there." The sallors amused themselves with Trade generally is very good in the east, and the factories in Pennsylvania are working day and night. Silver, at the present time, the judge says, is not much talked about.

SENATORIAL HEADQUARTERS Are All Now Running at Full Blast.

The four senatorial headquarters are now running at full blast, and all of them were favored with quite a number of New Year callers yesterday. Judge Powers entertained in his affable manner in the cosy rooms of the Cullen hotel which brought Senator Rawlins good luck. The judge made a party call at Judge King's and Senator Cannon's apartments at the Knutstord. There will probably be a general interchange of courtesies now that the ice has been brooken.

Fisher Harris was kept very busy resterday receiving friends, the Me-tune headquarters being througed all Cune headquarters being thronged all day long with enthusiastic supporters of Mr. McCune. S. A. King, Judge Burton and Judge King were equally busy at the Knutsford, where all caliers, including a number of ladies, were made very welcome.
